MEOSPHERE GIVE AWAY ALLOWS USERS TO CHOOSE THEIR OWN
$10,000 PRIZE

From Around the World Trips to Visiting the Antarctica, Entrants Dream Big to Expand their Meosphere

SALT LAKE CITY (June 11, 2007) – If you had $10,000, what on your list of life adventures would you check off? Meosphere users are dreaming big this summer and answering that question in hopes that the Web site will pick up the $10,000 tab for them to expand their life experience. Meosphere (www.meosphere.com) is an online community where people document the places they've seen, things they've done and their plans for the future.

“People are coming up with very creative list-oriented ways to use $10,000,” said Meosphere CEO and Founder Eric Eliason. “Meosphere is all about expanding ones experiences, and $10,000 can definitely do that.”

Some of the twenty-words-or-less entries to date include:

- “Ohhh, to buy a pair of shoes in New York, Paris, Dubai, London, Chicago, Milan, Singapore, Madrid, Bangkok, Barcelona.” – Crystal, Idaho
- “Drink wine in France, eat pasta in Italy, visit pubs in Ireland, eat chocolate in Belgium, return home to sleep.” – Julie, California
- “I want to ride every roller coaster in the United States.” – Shaun, Utah
- “Take my bro and my pops to watch every NFL team play at home from the Black Hole to Lambeau!” – Ryan, Washington
- “I want to visit every island in the ‘Keys’ and never wear shoes the entire time!” – Paul, Indiana
- “I would tour the U.S. in an RV visiting all 48 of the continental states.” – Vince, Ohio

The deadline for the entries is July 15, 2007. The Meosphere community is experiencing rapid growth as individuals discover this way to identify and share what makes them unique. With users in all 50 states and more than 60 countries, Meosphere users are diverse in age, nationality and interests.

About Meosphere

Everyone has one, though most are undocumented. Launched in March of 2007, Meosphere is a Web 2.0 community that allows users to document where they have been, what they have done and what they want to do – it defines one’s own personal world, in a very personal way. Meosphere.com presents a plethora of lists ranging from simple topics to deep life-changing experiences – and then gives users the chance to show how these items have shaped their lives and personalities.
